THE LOST KISS.

I put by the half written poem,
While the pen, idly trailed in my hand,
Writes on, "Had I words to complete it,
Who'd read it, or who'd understand?"

But the little bare feet on the stairway
And the faint, smothered laugh in the hall
And the eerie low lisp in the silence
Cry up to me over it all.

So I gathered it up, where was broken
The tear faded thread of my theme,
Telling how as one night I sat writing
A fairy broke in on my dream—

A little inquisitive fairy,
My own little girl, with the gold
Of the sun in her hair and the dewy
Blue eyes of the fairies of old.

'Twas the dear little girl that I scolded,
"For was it a moment like this,"
I said, "when she knew I was busy,
To come romping in for a kiss—

Come rowdying up from her mother
And clamoring there on my knee
For "one little kiss for my dolly
And one little uzer for me!"

God pity the heart that repelled her
And the cold hand that turned her away
And take from the lips that denied her
This answerless prayer of today!

Take, Lord, from my memory forever
That pitiful sob of despair
And the patter and trip of the little bare feet
And the one piercing cry on the stair!

I put by the half written poem,
While the pen, idly trailed in my hand,
Writes on, "Had I words to complete it,
Who'd read it, or who'd understand?"

But the little bare feet on the stairway
And the faint, smothered laugh in the hall
And the eerie low lisp in the silence
Cry up to me over it all

THE UNKNOWN.

The cemeteries of cities are like great hotels, where the close proximity of people in different classes of life is not always happy. The walls of partition seem to leak a secret horror of unrest; there is something of constraint, of promiscuosity, of cold dignity in the obligatory relations of body to body. Here the dead are not at home.

In the graveyards of the country, among the thick flowering underbrush and the quiet of the wide fields, is a better repose for us after our stormy struggles. A cemetery thus situated, the center of farreaching horizons, inspires one with a desire to die. To lie down here and sleep seems good. But most peaceful of all are the realms of the dead in marine villages, at the edge of the sea, within sound of the lulling of the running waves which sing an eternal song on the eternal sleep, amid the wail of the wind over the ancient tombs.

One day about 15 years ago I entered one of these places of supreme rest beside the waves on the Breton coast, with its crosses pointing toward heaven in a way which makes one think of eternity. Beside a little old church, beneath the shadow of a stone bell turret, slept the forefathers who, whether they had died in youth or in age, were all made an equal age by accomplished time. And there was no sadness in this evidence of a fatal destiny, but rather a happy relief in the thought that the burden of suffering will not always weigh down our poor shoulders and that sorrow has its prescribed limit. And pleasant, too, was the slow spelling out of the inscriptions on the tombs in the warmth of the sunlight which the fluttering, intoxicated birds greeted with a sweet delirium of song. Three centuries of time separated the old stones from the new, and a peace was made over all feuds here under the high crosses with outstretched arms, clear cut against the green sea, standing in their eternal attitude of forgiveness.

One tomb in the form of a chalice arrested my attention, and I read this singular epitaph: "Here lies an unknown Dec. 6, 1871. Tacita transit" (she has passed silently).

I wished to learn all that was known of her, and in the evening I inquired in the village, and this is what I learned:

In November of the year 1860, on a night of lowering sky and raging sea, as the inhabitants slept in their huts, which were shaken up by the squall, the dull boom of a cannon announced the distress of a ship out on the waters across the promontory. At this time the little port did not possess a single lifeboat, and to attempt to depart in such a gale in the barks of the fishermen would be simply folly. Each one who heard the sound could only pray, "God help them!" But doubtless the noises of the angry sea drowned out the human voices, and God heard nothing, for next morning the sea stretched wide under the blue sky, swept clear—not a speck on the horizon, nothing but the ripples of foam on the waves. So it had disappeared, foundered, the boat that had cried for help with a call of iron during that night of terror. The sadness of the disaster caused a silence among the fishermen, when suddenly down on the strand a cry arose. At this moment the Marquis de Pontus, master of the chateau, came up to the group of people to learn the end of the night's drama.

The cry had come from a peasant who had discovered the body of a woman clothed in a long white robe, thrown between two enormous rocks. She was apparently dead and must have rolled from her bed on the ship into the sea.

"Her heart still beats!" cried the peasant. The marquis commanded, "Carry her to my house quickly and wrap this cloak around her."

He was obeyed. In fact, the woman still lived and after hours of ingenious labor opened her eyes.

"Ask her nothing," said Pontus. "She is still too weak and must sleep."

In the meanwhile the searchers continued from strand to strand, but nothing more was found. It was impossible to tell what this vessel was which had gone down in the near waters. French? English? All a mystery! It had carried its flag to the depths of the sea.

"The woman will tell us," said Pontus. And the next day he went to her bedside. She looked at him with eyes large, beautiful and clear, but empty of comprehension. She was young and very pretty, with hands delicately and finely shaped. He asked her where she came from, where she was going, who she was, in phrases gentle and courteous, for he was already moved by her tragic beauty. She listened without making a sign and did not answer. He repeated his question, saying he troubled her only for her own good. She remained silent, and it was evident his words conveyed nothing to her.

"Perhaps she doesn't understand French," said a friend.

"She understands nothing at all," said Pontus sadly. "I fear she has lost her mind in the horror of the catastrophe. But it does not matter. She has fallen from heaven, and she is at home here, mad or sane. God sent her to me, and I will guard her." And he kept his word.

Days, months, years, passed. The unknown lived silently, without words and apparently without thoughts. She loved to be out of doors and mixed with other people, seeming by all exterior appearances to be like them. At the table of the marquis, in the family of a refined ancient race, she carried herself with the grace and dignity of one accustomed to a similar world, and Pontus often said, "This child is a great lady."

In spite of the most thorough investigations not a ray of light, even the faintest, pierced the mystery. It could not even be conjectured what the boat lost at the coast had been or who this woman was who accepted placidly the care of strangers, showed neither sadness nor joy, had no desires and lived unconsciously the life of a beautiful white bird in a cage of gold. Little by little the marquis grew attached to her. His house was large, and he refused to have her confined in a hospital, repeating that she was his charge and sacred to him above everything. And sometimes when he watched her walking in the park of the chateau Pontus would grow very sad and murmur, "If this beautiful girl had a soul, how I would love her!" And Pontus, who was then in his thirty-sixth year, refused obstinately to marry—on account of the unknown.

And so he grew older, and with the years came a deeper melancholy. However, in his voluntary seclusion there was some sweetness. The woman seemed to like to be near him, though her manner was like that of a petted animal. She ran to him when she saw him and looked at him with her clear eyes, in which shone a fugitive light of recognition and devotion, but the next moment she would run away again, often into the woods, where she wandered about all day, returning always at dusk, for she had a great dread of the darkness.

One stormy night in November she shuddered at the sound of the wind from the sea and groaned softly, with her hands clasped to her breast in an attitude of deep sadness. A little later she uttered a hoarse cry and fell to the floor unconscious. It was just 12 years since she had come to life in the chateau. Pontus, very much alarmed, hurried to the village for help. A doctor was summoned and returned with him in great haste. The patient was examined and the case diagnosed as quick consumption. She had carried the germs of the fatal disease in her system for some time. Pontus was in despair.

One morning in the winter the unknown passed quietly away in the arms of the marquis. At the supreme moment the mysterious sick woman seemed to regain her reason suddenly. She looked about with eyes frightened but comprehensive, which seemed to say: "Where am I? Who are these men?" She opened her lips to speak at last in her native language, but death, jealous of the mystery, sealed her tongue with his icy touch.

The marquis, inconsolable, had engraved on her tombstone the epitaph, "Tacita transit."—Translated For Cincinnati Tribune.

A Famous Blunderer.

M. Calino, the popular French simpleton who performs in the humorous literature of France much the same function that the traditional Paddy does in English literature, has been made the subject of a grave study, in which his innocent stupidities are carefully analyzed. He is nothing more or less than a convenient personification of a type of the harmless blunderer and complacent lack wit found in all ages and countries. In France his sayings reflect, however, something of the picturesqueness which is characteristic of the nation.

Calino's blunderings, it seems, began at an early age. He had not craft enough to tell a lie that would hold water for a moment. One day at school he got into a fight with a companion and came home with a gash on his forehead.

"How did you get that cut?" asked his father.

"What cut, papa?"

"Why, that great gash on your forehead."

"I bit myself there, papa."

"Bit yourself! Why, you couldn't bite yourself on your forehead."

"I got up on a chair to do it, papa."

Later in life Calino delivered himself of the following bit of wisdom:

"As for me, I don't care so much for the sun as I do for the moon. You see, the sun only comes after it gets daylight, when we could see just as well without it, but the moon's some use—it shines at night."

Early one morning, when Calino was out with his gun, he saw a robin in the garden of his friend Camille. He aimed at it, but it dropped below the top of the wall. Then Calino went into the house, crept up stairs softly, stole into Camille's bedroom without waking Camille, who was in bed, pointed his gun out of the window at the robin and fired—bang!

Camille leaped out of bed in wild confusion and alarm.

"W—w—why—w—w—what's the matter?"

"Oh, did I wake you up?" said Calino. "I pulled the trigger just as softly as I could."—Youth's Companion.

root descendant of Joan de la Fanu, are you not?"

"Yes. And I don't thank the vandals who stole her effigy. I should have preferred that they had taken any of the others."

"Have you copied her epitaph yet, or sketched the tomb?"

"No, I have had no good opportunity, but I should uncommonly like to do so before I go, and I shall not have time tomorrow."

He spoke wistfully, and the dean laughed.

"Here, then," said he. "I see what you are fishing for. Take the keys. This large one opens the little northwest door, whence a staircase leads straight down to the back of the chapel. You can't make a mistake, only do not fall down the broken stairs, do not lose the keys, do not forget to lock up after you and, above all, don't set the place alight, or I'll never forgive you."

Roland promised everything required of him and went off.

Roland sought and soon found the little door to which he had been directed and from which the steps led straight down into the crypt of the cathedral. The key made but little noise, even in the great stillness, and Roland, groping his way down, soon found himself at the back of the little chapel and in great darkness. Closing his eyes for awhile to accustom them to the change, he could soon distinguish the outlines of the arches and moved forward quite confidently.

Some might have thought the hour and place eerie, but Roland was neither nervous nor superstitious and boldly advanced to where the moonlight, finding oblique entrance through the grating in the roof and near one of the great windows of the cathedral above him, shone clearly and brightly over the tombs.

It has been said that he was neither nervous nor superstitious, but suddenly he stopped short, and the throbbing of his own heart seemed for the moment to startle him, for here, just before him, within touch of his hand, was the great table tomb and extended upon it, apparently, a recumbent female figure.

Whoever, whether mortal or superhuman workman, had made such an effigy was possessed of no ordinary skill. The exquisite suggestion of repose conveyed by the graceful posture, the arrangement of the sculptured folds of raiment, the beautifully chiseled features, all were alike lovely, and Roland gazed at them long, as if he were literally entranced and not under the influence of some delusion of the senses, some trick of overexcited nerves, which must soon fade away. He fell on his knees on the stepped base of the monument and gently laid his lips on the little white fingers which were so temptingly near him. As he did so a thrill seemed to pass through him and through the figure on the tomb. The delicate eyelids quivered, the shadowy lips parted in a faint sigh, and the next instant his statue was indeed imbued with life and spoke:

"Where am I? Oh, where am I?"

Roland repressed the suggestion that she was reclining on her own tomb and spoke gently and as if her present position were a matter of course:

"You are in the crypt of Carminster cathedral."

The effigy sat up, pressing her cold hands to her now burning temples. Then she raised her great dark eyes to Roland's face.

"I got shut in," she said simply. "I lingered a moment to look at this tomb, because—well, because you were so much interested in it, and the verger never missed me—the pillars hid me. I heard the key grate in the lock and ran and called and banged, but no one came, and, oh, I was so frightened!" She was quivering with cold and shock, and Roland supported and comforted her. "But for you I might have staid here in this awful place all night," she murmured. "It's simply horrible!" she went on. "You wouldn't believe what noises there are when it's empty and no one here. What made you come back? Was it to look for me?" she asked naively.

He told her then how and why he had come back, giving her time to wipe away a few stray tears, which she hoped he did not see and to pull off the necktie from about her head. Then he found her hat for her in a shadowy nook and prepared to take her home.

She was glad of the support of his arm, and the clinging touch of her fingers sent a thrill through him which he seemed to feel long after they had parted.

"I recognized you again at once," she said to him as they ascended the rickety staircase together.

"I, too, remember you quite well. We were fellow tourists or sightseers this morning, and I have thought of you many times since and always as the lady in the gray cloak."

She smiled very humanly.

"My real name," she said simply, "is Joan."

Roland started slightly, and as he pressed her hand at parting murmured beneath his breath:

"By the Wille of God, Joan, the beloved wife of Roland de le Fanu, Knight and Gentilman."—Princess.

"Away with Melancholy,

And bid dull care avaunt," sounds very well in verse, but if you have a case of the "blues" caused by indigestion, with biliousness added on as an extra horror, you cannot say hey! presto! and thus insure the departure of those abominable twins. The "proper caper" when thus troubled, is to seek the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Thereafter you will speedily digest with ease and eat with appetite, and your liver will reassert its right to regularity. Not only this, you can retire without a horrible dread that the Washington monument will—in dreams—impose itself upon the pit of your stomach. If you feel premonitory symptoms of chills and fever, kidney trouble or or rheumatism, summon the Bitters to the rescue without delay, "lest a worse thing befall you." A feeble condition of the system is more speedily changed to a vigorous one by this fine tonic than by any other medicinal agency in existence. A wineglassful three times a day.

How Dr. Cuyler Became a Minister.

Peter Carter, in Golden Rule, tells how the Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler became a minister. It was chiefly owing to his mother's influence. Most of Theodore's immediate male ancestors were distinguished lawyers, and one of them offered him a fine library if he would enter the legal profession. His mother, however, had consecrated him to the ministry, and fearing that he might be persuaded into the study of law she sent him abroad, which was the first of his many trips across the sea. While he was absent in Europe, his mother engaged a room for him at Princeton Theological seminary, so strong was her faith that he was to be a minister. On his return from Europe young Cuyler went with his mother to visit some relatives near Ludlowville, N. Y., and while there made two or three addresses at small religious meetings. His addresses were so successful in their effect that he was convinced that the Christian ministry was his proper field of labor.

Ensilage.

Ensilage is made by cutting the cornstalk when the ear is still in the milk, chopping up stalk, blade, corn and cob and packing the green food in a vat usually about 20 feet deep. After the mass has been allowed to ferment for from 48 to 60 hours, depending on the warmth of the weather, the contents of the vat is weighted down and fermentation ceases. The resultant is food treated with lactic acid, the first operation in a cow's stomach. A cow fed with ensilage is spared the wear and tear on her system of the first digestive processes. A vat of ensilage will keep two years and longer. The food when taken out of the vat is as it was when the fermentation stopped. The ancient Romans used ensilage, and its value was rediscovered 40 years ago by Goffard, a Frenchman.—New York Post.

Scrofula Affects the Eyes—Little Boy Treated by an Oculist Without Relief—But Now He Is Well.

"When my little boy was three months old his eyes became very sore and he was almost blind. I took him to an oculist who treated him for six months, and left him as bad as he was at the beginning. Finally Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I began giving it to him. In less than three weeks he was able to go into the sun without covering his eyes, and today his eyes are perfectly well, and his ears and nose, which were badly affected, are also well. Hood's Sarsaparilla has certainly done wonders for my boy." MRS. JAMES H. PAINTER, Amador, California.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Henry Winkle Passes Away at His Home Near this Place.

Henry Winkle, a pioneer resident of this valley and San Francisco, was found dead in his bed on Thursday morning last, at his country home two miles east of this place. Mr. Winkle had returned from San Francisco on the evening preceding his death and retired at an early hour in his usual health, which had been quite poor of late, but still did not incapacitate him from attending to business.

Mr. Winkle not appearing at the breakfast hour his sister, Miss A. Winkle, went to his bed room door and called to him, thinking he had overslept himself. Getting no response she entered the room and discovered that he was dead. He had passed peacefully away sometime during the night. The cause of his sudden taking off was heart failure.

In addition to his extensive vineyards in this valley he was also the owner of Winkle's Bakery, corner of Vallejo and Battery streets, San Francisco, which was established by his brother in 1854.

The deceased was a native of Germany and aged about 54 years. He leaves a wife, two children and two sisters, one of the latter being Mrs. Adler of this place.

Henry Winkle was a genial, whole-souled gentleman and his friends in Sonoma and San Francisco were legion.

The remains were taken to San Francisco for interment yesterday.

Young Mens' Institute.

The annual ball of Sonoma Council, No. 45., Young Mens' Institute, will be held in Union Hall on Thanksgiving Eve, November 24th. For many years this order has given these annual social functions on Thanksgiving Eve and they have always proved a success both financially and socially.

Brevities.

The Texas horse fly, which visited this valley about a month ago, is still making itself known to the farmers. So far the death of two horses have been reported, but had proper treatment been resorted to the animals could have been saved.

An interesting civil suit will be called in Justice Cheney's court to-day. The suit was instituted by J. G. Davis of El Verano against N. Riebli to recover $7 damages, alleged to be due plaintiff for a number of ducks killed a few weeks ago by Riebli's dog.

Maurie Haraszthy, who has been engaged the past month in sprinkling the county roads between Sonoma, Embarcadero and El Verano, has been relieved of his job the past few days by Jupiter Pluvius, who turned loose the flood gates of heaven on Wednesday night last and has been sprinkling the roads on his own hook ever since. The roads in the vicinity of Sonoma which have been sprinkled by the county the past summer are in an excellent state of repair and go to prove that road sprinkling in this valley is a success in so far as the experiment has been tried.

On Wednesday night of last week T. S. Glaister, who owns one of the largest vineyards in Sonoma Valley, had a number of grape boxes destroyed by fire. The boxes were in the vineyard about a quarter of a mile from the winery, where they had been hauled that evening ready for early picking in the morning. The fire was discovered at about ten o'clock in the evening and it is supposed was caused by the dropping of a cigarette or cigar in the grass. Between forty and fifty boxes were destroyed. No further damage was done as it was impossible for the flames to reach any of the farm buildings.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

SCAFFOLDING OF THE NEW BRIDGE AT THE CHAUVET WINERY GIVES WAY.

Three Men Injured—The Scaffolding is Replaced and Again Collapses.

A thrilling accident occurred on Saturday afternoon last near Chauvet's winery, between this place and Glen Ellen. A large force of workmen are engaged at that point in erecting a new county bridge across Sonoma Creek. The concrete piers having been laid the foremen and a force of men were engaged in putting in the superstructure. The work had progressed very favorably up to Saturday afternoon when without a moment's warning the high scaffolding used to temporarily support the bridge gave way. There was a crash and the entire force of workmen, seven or eight in number, were precipitated to the creek below, a distance of thirty-five feet. That none of the men were killed is miraculous. As it was Wm. Lewis, a carpenter, was caught in the wreck of wood and iron and badly injured about the face, breast and lower limbs. Two other workmen were also quite seriously injured. The others, strange to relate, escaped without a scratch.

On Monday the scaffolding, which had again been placed in position, was blown down by a heavy blast of giant powder which had been set off in a cut in the road leading to the new structure. Fortunately when it tumbled down into the creek this time the workmen were standing on the banks of the stream and did not go down with the wreck a second time.

The loss will be quite serious to the contractors, Messrs. McMahon & Son of San Francisco.

JUPITER PLUVIUS.

Turns Loose the Flood Gates of Heaven and Puts a Stop to Wine-Making for the Present.

Rain commenced to fall in this valley at an early hour Thursday morning and continued without cessation until noon. It continued cloudy and threatening, however, until evening, when the clouds passed away and the stars made their appearance, much to the gratification of our vineyardists, as about one-third of the grape crop still remains unpicked. Yesterday morning the sky again became overcast and as we go to press (4 o'clock, Friday afternoon) indications point to a continuation of the storm, in which event much damage will result to grapes still on the vines.

Sad Death.

Miss Magdalena E. Cornelius, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. H. Cornelius, died at her home in this place, on Wednesday afternoon last, after an illness of nearly a year. The deceased was a pupil of the Sonoma Grammar School for a number of years and was very popular with her schoolmates. She was a native of Sonoma and aged 15 years, 10 months and 12 days. The funeral took place yesterday from the family residence, the remains being interred in the family burial plot in Mountain Cemetery.

To Seperate Prisons.

Wm. Herges and Geo. Reagan, convicted on Wednesday of last week of burglary in entering the S. F. & N. P. Railway depot in this place and blowing open the safe, were sentenced by Judge Dougherty on Monday last to ten years imprisonment each. Herges was taken to Folsom and Reagan to San Quentin. The capture and conviction of these robbers, who had long been a terror to the people of this valley, reflects great credit on Sheriff Allen and his efficient deputy, Chas. H. Ohm.

Heavy Crop of Grapes.

Most of the first crop of grapes in this valley have been picked and converted into wine. It will be two weeks or more before the second crop will be ripe enough for crushing. The yield this season has been unprecedented and varies between five and ten tons to the acre. Robt. Hall's vineyard will produce over two hundred tons, which is an average of nearly ten tons to the acre. Wm. McElroy, Wm. Goodman and many other vineyardists in this valley will get about seven tons. Wine making will be through about November 1st.

Sonoma Grove Receives a Visit From and Banquets the Grand Officers.

On Friday evening of last week Sonoma Grove, No. 75, U. A. O. D., received an official visit from Noble Grand Arch Henry Goller and Grand Secretary John M. Graves. A delegation from Petaluma Grove, No. 38, consisting of Brothers Geo. R. Swetmann, M. L. Hedderson, Geo. Griess and H. Ludy accompanied the Grand Officers on their visit.

A large number of Druids were in the lodge room to greet their distinguished guests.

After the business of the lodge had been transacted and the work of the order exemplified by the Grand Officers the Brothers repaired to the Toscano Hotel, where a sumptuous spread, prepared by mine hosts, Messrs. Ciucci & Martinoni, awaited them. Feasting, toasting, speech-making and good cheer were the order of the evening and ample justice was done by the forty Druids present to the good things set before them.

Speeches were made by Brothers Graves, Goller, Granice, Swetmann and Sonognini. Mayor J. H. Seipp, who was present by special invitation, also delivered a pleasing address.

The visit of Brothers Graves and Goller will be looked back to with pleasure for many years yet to come by the members of Sonoma Grove, which is one of the soundest lodges financially in California. The lodge now has a membership of seventy-five.

City Trustees.

The City Trustees met in regular session last Wednesday evening, a full Board being present, as follows: President Seipp and Trustees Hartin, Bulotti, Poppe and Modini.

The following bills were allowed and ordered paid, the minutes of the previous meeting having been read and approved:

H. Castagnasso, gravel	$6.75
J. N. Stademan, labor	2.00
L. Breitenbach	50
Total	$9.25

The bill of S. Schocken, amounting to $150 for removing buildings on the extension of First-street East, was presented and laid over until the next meeting of the Trustees.

On motion of Trustee Hartin, which received a second from Trustee Bulotti, the Clerk was instructed to notify the Sonoma Valley Bank, Temple Lodge, No. 14., F. & A. M., Mrs. Ellen Glynn and C. Aguillon to repair the curbing in front of their respective properties without delay.

The Clerk was also instructed, on motion of Trustee Bulotti, seconded by Trustee Modini, to notify Otto Schetter to remove the remains of Otto Schetter, Jr., from the public receiving vault in Mountain Cemetery and to pay charges due the city for use of same.

The Board then adjourned.

Moonshiners on a Small Scale.

Internal Revenue Officer Dunn, acting on information secretly furnished him, raided the wine cellar of the Nicolini Bros., located on their mountain ranch five miles north of Sonoma, on Monday afternoon last, and captured two bottles of brandy that had evidently been made from a rude still which was found in the wine cellar. The latter was destroyed. Officer Dunn evidently expected to make a big seizure, as he went prepared to take possession and put a keeper in charge of the ranch. There was no occasion for this, however, as the evidence secured did not warrant confiscation.

The Nicolini Bros. who are honest, hard-working young men, claim that the whole thing was a put-up job on them. That they are being persecuted by certain parties who have a grudge against them. They say that the two bottles of brandy found in their house was not made on the place, but is part of a gallon purchased by them some time ago.

Death of a Sonoma Pioneer.

L. P. Rixford, one of the pioneer settlers of this State and for many years owner of the Rixford ranch, adjoining the Wickersham place, is dead. The end came at his residence in San Francisco, 1910 Lyon street, on Thursday of last week. The deceased was born in Winchester, N. H., January 10th, 1814. He was married on June 23rd, 1837, to Elvira Pickering, so that he completed the sixtieth anniversary of his marriage only a few months ago. As the result of this union there were two sons, Emmett and G. P. Rixford. Mr. Rixford will be remembered by all the old residents of this valley and it will be with sorrow that they learn of his death. The funeral of deceased, which was private, took place on the 15th inst.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SONNET.

Our yesterdays inthrall our morrows still
By chains no rust of time can wear away,
That with their iron and persistent sway
Serve purposes undreamed of to fulfill
And wake up echoes of the good and ill
In mournful cadence or a rhythm gay.
Ofttimes what fateful sequences are they
Which follow trifling acts of sudden will!
Small streams grow broader as they onward wind
To reach at last the ever rolling sea.
Hark back through memory's labyrinth and we find
Small accidents—if accidents there be—
Had power our future years to free or bind
And be the factors of our destiny!
—Camilla Crossland in Chambers' Journal.

IN NEWGATE PRISON.

The Prison Was a Noisome Place In Queen Elizabeth's Day.

In St. Nicholas there is an interesting story, "Master Skylark," a narrative of Shakespeare's time, written by John Bennett. One of the leading characters, Gaston Carew, a ruffling player, has been put in Newgate for killing a companion at cards. The hero, Nick Atwood, the Skylark, visits him there.

It was a foul, dark place and full of evil smells. Drops of water stood on the cold stone walls, and a green mold crept along the floor. The air was heavy and dank, and it began to be hard for Nick to breathe.

"Up with thee," said the turnkey gruffly, unlocking the door to the stairs.

The common room above was packed with miserable wretches. The strongest kept the window ledges near light and air by sheer main force and were dicing on the dirty sill. The turnkey pushed and banged his way through them, Nick clinging desperately to his jerkin.

In the cell at the end of the corridor there was a Spanish renegade who railed at the light when the door was opened and railed at the darkness when it closed. "Cesare el Moro, Cesare el Moro," he was saying over and over again to himself, as if he feared he might forget his own name.

Carew was in the middle cell, ironed hand and foot. He had torn his sleeves and tucked the lace under the rough edges of the metal to keep them from chafing the skin. He sat on a pile of dirty straw, with his face in his folded arms upon his knees. By his side were a broken biscuit and an empty stone jug. He had his fingers in his ears to shut out the tolling of the knell for the men who had gone to be hanged.

The turnkey shook the bars. "Here, wake up!" he said.

Carew looked up. His eyes were swollen, and his face was covered with a two days' beard. He had slept in his clothes, and they were full of broken straw and creases. But his haggard face lit up when he saw the boy, and he came to the grating with an eager exclamation: "And thou hast truly come to the man thou dost hate so bitterly, but will not hate any more? Come, Nick, thou will not hate me any more. 'Twill not be worth thy while, Nick. The night is coming fast."

"Why, sir," said Nick, "it is not so dark outside—'tis scarcely noon, and thou wilt soon be out."

"Out? Ay, on Tyburn hill," said the master player quietly. "I've spent my whole life for a bit of hempen cord. I've taken my last cue. Last night, at 12 o'clock, I heard the bellman under the prison walls call my name with those of the already condemned. The play is nearly out, Nick, and the people will be going home. It has been a wild play, Nick, and ill played."

Got $2,000 For Driving His Wagon.

A few years ago a well to do but extravagant farmer living out on the Russell cave pike went to Mr. Hart Boswell and asked him to see his brother Dave of the Northern bank and tell him that he wanted to borrow $2,000 and that it would be all O. K., etc. Mr. B. told him that he would not do it, but gave him the following tip: "I see you or your wife calling negroes out of the field two or three times a day to hitch your rigs up to go to Lexington, and I see you stop hands from their field work to drive a load of corn to market. You stop all this foolishness and drive the wagon of corn yourself, then go to the bank and ask for what you want." The man went, according to directions, and after he had sold his corn he went to the bank and asked for the $2,000. Mr. R. T. Anderson, one of the directors, was present and without asking any questions said, "Any man who drives his own wagon can borrow all the money he wants at the Northern bank." This little transaction changed this man's condition in life, and he was no longer a money borrower.—Lexington American.

Better Known In England.

It is said that the late Daniel Greenleaf Thompson of this city had his books published in England not from any lack of patriotism, but because the serious works that he produced found a much better market in England. "Like General Walker, he was much better known as an author in England than he was in his own country. He belonged to the individualist school, and it is perhaps a curious fact that, while Americans are instinctively as individualistic as any people in the world, their controversial literature affords few good examples of the expression of individualistic social or economic theories."—Boston Transcript.

Trade Secrets.

"Quite irrespective of the immense number of workmen who hold trade secrets of their respective employers, few people ever realize what a number of workmen there are who hold small secrets—some of them may consist merely of a knack of doing some particular thing in a peculiar way—of their own, and most rigidly guard these," remarked a well known trades union official.

"I could cite many remarkable cases where workmen, on account of their method of doing some one apparently simple thing, have always been at a premium with various masters, and only the other day I was talking to the head of a great decorating firm about such a man.

"This firm has often, in decorating great mansions and public buildings, to carry out a certain scheme of color, and that one color has to be uniform throughout a great area of covered space. This firm had one man who, if 100 rooms had to be painted, could infallibly mix fresh supplies of color to the exact shade, but during its 40 years of existence the firm never had another workman who could do this.

"I could name for you 100 trades where some one man effects his object with a few strokes where others labor long and patiently, but what I want to impress on the public is that workmen possess and guard far more minor trade secrets of their own than the masters ever did or do."—Pearson's Weekly.

Don't Tobacco Spit and Smoke Your Life Away.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the Sonoma Index-Tribune and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietor of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

A MOTHER'S RUSE.

Saved Her Sons From Conscription, but Changed the Family Name.

A gentleman living in Boston told an interesting story the other day about how some of his blood relatives happened to have a family name different from his own. It seems that during the persecutions in Scotland these particular Kirkpatricks went over to Ireland and settled in Belfast. Subsequently the head of the family came across the ocean and as soon as he was established sent for his wife to join him, bringing with her their four sons, two of whom were old enough to make stripling soldiers had some exigency demanded such a sacrifice. The journey was undertaken in a slow going ship bound for New York, and while she was somewhere in mid-Atlantic the war of 1812 between England and the United States broke out.

The ship when nearing our seaboard was overtaken by a British cruiser, which put her about and escorted her to Halifax, Nova Scotia. The officer in command of the cruiser declared his intention of impressing sailors and soldiers from among the passengers. A mother having more than two sons would have to give up all over that number who might be available for military or naval service. Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who was a quick witted woman, instantly planned a ruse which she justified in her own mind by calling it ruse de guerre (a trick of war). She stood two sons in one part of the ship and two in another and was accepted, without detection, as the mother of both pairs, though she called herself Kirkpatrick in one instance and Kilpatrick in the other.

After they disembarked the deception had to be kept up, as they were constantly under the eyes of British officers. The interception by the cruiser resulted in the family settling in Halifax instead of in the United states, but even after peace was restored the two Kirkpatrick boys found it much harder to get their name back than it had been to exchange it on shipboard. In fact, they never got it back.

Those who had come to know them as Kilpatricks refused to know them as Kirkpatricks, and in the course of time the effort to reclaim the family name was abandoned as hopeless. The variation in prefix made expedient pro tem. by the intermeddling cruiser seems to have been ordained to continue sine die.—Harper's Round Table.

OUR SMALLER COLLEGES.

In Many Respects They Are Doing Better Work Than the Larger Institutions.

"There are a few striking facts about the small American college," writes Edward W. Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal. "One striking fact is that 60 per cent of the brainiest Americans who have risen to prominence and success are graduates of colleges whose names are scarcely known outside of their own states. It is a fact also that during the past ten years the majority of the new and best methods of learning have emanated from the smaller colleges and have been adopted later by the larger ones. Because a college happens to be unknown 300 miles from the place of its location does not always mean that the college is not worthy of wider repute. The fact cannot be disputed that the most direct teaching and necessarily the teaching most productive of good results is being done in the smaller American colleges.

The names of these colleges may not be familiar to the majority of people, but that makes them none the less worthy places of learning. The larger colleges are unquestionably good, but there are smaller colleges just as good and in some respects better. Some of the finest educators we have are attached to the faculties of the smaller institutions of learning. Young girls or young men who are being educated at one of the smaller colleges need never feel that the fact of the college being a small one places them at a disadvantage in comparison with the friend or companion who has been sent to a larger and better known college. It is not the college; it is the student."

Tricks on the Teachers.

The other day a pupil in one of the public schools asked the teacher to do a little example in grammar, and since then what seemed at first to be a simple problem has had the serious consideration of all the pedagogues in the community, and it has been unanimously agreed that there is no rule in grammar to cover the point raised. The youngster's proposition was this:

"It is two miles to Woodfords. Now, please write under that sentence, 'There are two twos in the above sentence.'"

That is what the boy said. He did not submit the problem in writing, and when the teacher tried to follow his injunction she found out the reason why. It dawned on her that there were not two twos, neither were there two tos, and how to express in writing what was easy enough to do verbally she ascertained to be impossible.

The boy responsible for the foregoing must be a near relative to the youth who asked his teacher how to spell paris green, and when she replied, 'P-a-r par, i-s, paris, g-r-e-e-n, green; paris green," retorted:

"No; you're wrong. You can't spell paris green, or blue, or any other color. You can't spell it anything but paris."—Portland Argus.
